10 pounds' worth of contactors in a 5 pound box

It is important for students to see for themselves just how crazy some situations are in the industrial world. However, if you ever find yourself working at a facility where you witness something as awful as what you see here, you have a professional obligation to take some corrective action. Even a "small" gesture such as bringing it to the attention of someone who can devote resources to the problem's correction is not wasted. Whatever you do, though, please do not contribute to the chaos!
